STANDARD-PHONOGRAPHIC SERIES COMPLETED WITH THIS VOLUME: 1. Synopsis. 2. Hand Book. 3. First Reader. 4. Second Reader. 5. Dictionary.

A WORK of this kind unquestionably needed.... But practically impossible with requisite completeness and within reasonable limit of price, before the construction of a definite, convenient, and systematic nomenclature.

Perfection of result not easily conceivable.... More difficult of actual accomplishment.... Especially in previously unlabored fields. Witness this work—the product of three years' diligent elaboration. But the earnest effort, perchance, not undeserving commendation.... As it may result in great advance upon the old.... And approximate sufficiently the desired end.

The only real Pronouncing Dictionaries those in which, as in this, words are respelled with a simple, certain, and accurate pronouncing alphabet. May be rendered available to Foreigners by introductory works.

As to the best system of Phonography—it is an obsolete question ...Already decided in favor of Standard-Phonography by its natural opponents.

The uniformity, accuracy, and taste displayed in the typographical details of this work due chiefly to the experience, judgment, and intelligent care of the compositor, Mr. A. O. WHELPLEY, and of the proof-reader, Mr. S. JENKINS.

Fervent Thanks for Life spared and the Blessed Opportunity of Achievement for a Beautiful and Useful Art.

A portion of this work will give indications that it was written in the time of the Slaveholders' Rebellion. May the Nation emerge from this momentous contest strong in Principle, and justified by its Uprisen Martyrs—having secured the Territory of a Great Republic, with a Worthy Constitution, presided over by the Genii of Impartial Justice and Universal Freedom.

INTRODUCTION.

PHONOGRAPHIC NOMENCLATURE.

1. THE names of the simple-consonant strokes are—Pee, Bee, Tee, Dee, Chay, Tay, Kay, Gay, Ef, Vae, Ith, Dhee (pronounced as the pronoun thee; dh throughout the author's system of nomenclature denoting the sound of th in thy or breathes, while th denotes the sound of th in think or breath), Es, Zee, Ish (sh written downward), Shay (sh written upward), Zhay (zh having the sound of si in vision), Ll (l written downward), Lay (l written upward), Ar (the curve sign for r, which is always written downward), Ray (the straight sign for r, which is always written upward), Em, En, Ing, Way, Yay, Hay.

2. The circle for s or z, in order to distinguish it from the stroke, is named Iss, where its sound can not be conveniently spoken in one syllable with the name of the stroke to which it is joined. Skay, or Iss-Kay, is the s-circle and the stroke for k. Iss-Bee, or Sbee, the s-circle and the stroke for b.

3. The large circle is named Ses or Sez, printed either in a separate syllable, or added to the name of a stroke without a preceding hyphen. Thus, Ses-Pee, Ses-Tee, Ses-En, Ses-Lay, Chay'ses or Chay-Ses, En'ses or En-Ses, Ith'ses or Ith-Ses, Lay'ses or Lay-Ses, Dee'ses-Iss.

4. The loop for st is named Stëh (e as in met), or the sound of the letters st is spoken in connection with the name of the stroke to which the loop is joined: thus, Steh-Tee, Steh-Pee, Star (st-loop and the downward r), Chayst, Kayst, Enst, Wayst, Ithst or Theest, Dheest, Efst or Feest, Ish-Steh.

5. The loop for str is named Ster. To distinguish it from the name of another letter (Iss and Ter, or simply Ster), it is made to form, with the name of the preceding letter, a single word, accented on the first syllable. For example, En, Bess and Kay form with the name for the loop Ster, the words Enster, Bee'ster, Kay'ster.

6. The brief sign for w is called Brief Way, or, in order to distinguish between the different facings of the sign, Wëh, when facing to the right, and Wüh, when facing to the left. When joined as a hook to Em, En, Lay, Ray, the characters thus formed are named Wem, Wen, Wel, Wer.

7. The brief sign for y is named Brief Yay, or, in order to distinguish between the different directions, Yëh, when the sign opens upward, and Yüh, when it opens downward.

8. The brief Way and Yay, when written in the vowel-places to indicate a following vowel, are called wë, yë, wā, yā, etc., the w and y being printed with a small letter.

9. The tick for h may be called Hetch, or named in accordance with a plan hereafter explained (23) of naming ticks, vowel-dashes, etc. (b.) The dot for h may be called Hëh, or spoken in connection with the vowels; thus, hë, hā, hū, etc. (c.) Aspirated detached wë, yë, etc., are denoted by whë or hwë, yhe or hyë, etc.; aspirated Way by Whay; (d.) aspirated Wel, Wer, Wem, Wen, by Whel, Wher, Whem, When.

10. The El-hook signs are named, Pel, Bel, Tel, Del, Kel, Gel (g as in gay), Fel, Vel, Tael, Dhel, Shel, Zhel, Yel, Mel, Nel, Rel.

11. The Ar-hook signs are named, Per, Ber, Ter, Der, Cher, Jer, Ker, Ger, Fer Ver, Ther, Dher, Sher, Zher, Mer, Ner.

12. The back hook for in, en, or un, written at the beginning of Iss-Per or Sper Iss-Ter or Ster, and some other letters, is named In; thus, In-Sper=In-Iss-Per=Ins-Per, In-Ster, In-Sker. In-Iss-Lay=In-Slay=Ins-Lay.

13. The enlarged El-hook signs, i. e., the Ler-hook signs, are named, Pler, Bler, Tler or Teher, Dler, etc. See Comp., 175.

14. The enlarged Ar-hook signs, i. e., the Rel-hook signs, are named, Prel, Trel, etc. See Comp., 175.

15. The simple, or group, signs with an Ef-hook, are named by prefixing the sounds they represent to the syllable Ef, if this can be done conveniently; if not, add the sound of j to the syllable-name of the stroke; thus, Pef, Caej, Ref, Ploj, Hef or Iefj, Chref or Chertj, Prefj, Plerj, Chlerj, Thef (see Comp., 182, L. 1), Dhef (Dhee with the Ef hook), Sh f (Ish with the Ef-hook), Wayf (Way with the Ef-hook).

16. The simple, and the group, signs with the En-hook, are named by prefixing the sounds they represent to the syllable En, or, if more convenient, or better for distinction's sake, by prefixing the syllable-name of the stroke to the syllable En, or to the sound of n, the accent being placed upon the name of the stroke; thus, Per, Kan, Pien, Chlen or Chelen, Pren, Chren or Chern, Pren, Plern, Chlern, Enea (not Sen-Iss-En), Shen or Ishren (downward, i. e., Ish with the En-hook), Shayn (upward, i. e., Shay with the En-hook), Len (upward, i. e., Lay with the En-hook), Eler (downward, i. e., El with the En-hook), Ing'en, Wayn (instead of Wen, which is En with the Way-hook), Yayn, Ren, Hen. (b.) P added to the name of Brief or Enlarged Way denotes the addition of an Ef-hook; thus, Wehf, Yuhf, Waywhf, Wehrwehf, Yuirwuhf, Wuhryuhf. See 6, 7, 25, and 26 of this Introduction.

17. The name of a Shon-hook or Tiv-hook sign is formed by adding the syllable Shon or Tiv, as the case may be, to the name of the stroke; thus, Peer'shon, Deer'shon, Ray'shon, Pel'shon, Per'shon, Pler'shon, Prei'shon, Wer'shon, Rel'shon; Peertiv, Deertiv, Chay'tiv, Peltiv, Rel'tiv, Pertiv, Chertiv, Pler'tiv, Pre'tiv.

18. The small hook for shon, is named Eshon, printed either in a separate syllable, or rather added, without a preceding hyphen, to the name of a stroke; thus, Dees-Eshon or Deeseshon, decision; Pees-Eshon or Peeseshon, position, possession; Perseshon, persuasion; Trenseshon, transition. See Comp., 197, 1.

19. The widened Em is named Emp or Emb, according as it represents mp or mb; thus, with a circle or loop, Embs, Emps, Semp, Semb, Empses, Stemp, Flapst, Empster, Empseshon; with a hook, Embren, Empren, Emb'shon, Emp'shon.

20. Lengthened strokes, doubled, trebled, or quadrupled, are named by prefixing the name of the stroke to the sound added by lengthening, or the sound of the stroke to the syllable eter, eder, ether, or edher; thus, Ing'ker, Ing'ger, Lay'ter, Lay'ther or Lay'dher; Way'ter, Wen'dher, Fel'ther, Fer'dher; Chay'dher, Kav'dher; Per'ter or Pre'ter, Tre'ter, Ter'dher, Ther'ter or Thre'ter; Chay'dherdher, Way'dherdher; Cherdherdherdher, Waydherdherdher. See Comp., 207; 264; 264, R. 9.

21. The syllables ter, der, ther, dher, ker, ger, when they indicate strokes, are commenced with capital letters, and are separated from the name of any preceding stroke to which they are joined, by a hyphen; thus, En-Ter, entry; Sen-Der, sundry; Ver-Ther, over-throw; Ef-Dher, feathery; Ing-Ger, angry.

22. The half-lengths are named by adding the syllable Et or Ed to the sound of the full-length, except when it is more convenient, or better for distinction's sake, to add the sound of t or d to the syllable-name of the full-length; thus, Pet or Iod,

Bet or Bed, Chet or Ched, Jet or Jed, Ket or Ked, Fet or Eft, Vet or Ved; Phet, Thed, or Itht; Dhcd or Dhct; Est (downward), Ist (shortened Es written upward, as in Nen<sup>1</sup>-1st, opinionist), Isht or Shet (downward), Shayt (upward), Zhed, Let, Eld, Met, Med, Net or Ent, Ned or End, Art, Ard, Plet or Peld, Tlet or Telt, Delt or Diet, Deld or Died, Chlet or Chelt, Pret or Pert, Bred or Berd, Fret or Fred, Dred, Chert or Chret, Jerd, Kred, Gred or Gerd, Tret or Tred, Vert or Verd, Thred or Therd; Dhred, Dherd or Dhret; Shert Shred or Sherd; Zherd, Mert or Merd; Pest, Best, Tett, Dett, Preft, Bleft, Kreft, Cherft; Pent, Bent, Bend, Tont, Tend, Chent, Chend, Pent, Fend, Thent, Dhent, Es<sup>1</sup> t, Es<sup>1</sup> end, Shend or Ishend, Waynd (Wayn shortened), Peers<sup>1</sup>hont or Peers<sup>1</sup>hend, Deers<sup>1</sup>hond, etc.; Wemt or Wemd, Wert or Werd.

23. The dash-vowel word-signs, and similar small signs may be named by the words they represent, as 'all,' 'of,' 'to,' 'I,' 'he,' etc.; or names may be formed for them by adding the syllable oid (signifying like, or resembling) to the names of the half-lengths which these small signs resemble. Bed<sup>1</sup>-oid<sup>1</sup> is the sign for all; Ded<sup>1</sup>-oid<sup>1</sup> is the sign for already; Kret<sup>1</sup>-oid<sup>2</sup> is the horizontal and-tick with the Ar-hook; Pest<sup>1</sup>-oid<sup>2</sup> is the word-sign for to with the Ef-hook.

24. Prefix and Affix signs are indicated by quoting them, thus, 'eon,' 'eom,' 'aeom' 'diseon,' 'ing,' 'ingly,' 'bility;' or, their signs may be indicated by syllable-names.

POSITION.

27. The figures 1, 2, 3 are used to denote respectively the first, second, and third position. The figure 4 is employed to indicate that the letter after whose name it is placed is to be written to imply a preceding to, according to the Comp., 250, Kem. 2. Thus, Es<sup>1</sup> is Es commencing at the line of writing, as in writing 'to say' in the Reporting Style. See under To in this Dictionary.

LETTERS DISJOINED, OR CROSSING, ETC.

28. To indicate that a sign is to be written disjoined near the other portion of the word, it is preceded or followed by a colon. En:Beest, indicates that En is to be written near, but not joined, to Beest. (b.) In phrase-forms a letter without a position-figure and preceded by the colon is meant to overlap the preceding letter (as Ted overlaps Ter or Dee in Dated and Treated in § 213 of the Compendium); thus, by "At what time, Tet<sup>3</sup>:Tee (or :Tee<sup>1</sup>)," it is denoted that Tee for time may be written so as to overlap Tet<sup>3</sup> (at what), or it may be separated from Tet<sup>3</sup> by the usual word-space and written in its proper position as a word-sign.

29. The dagger (†) is printed between two signs to indicate that the character following it is to be written through the preceding one; thus, 'En†Ef' indicates that the Ef is to be written through the En.

30. By inclosing one or more letters (not vowels) in curves, it is indicated that the writer may, if he choose, dispense with the sign or signs for such letters.

31. Vowels are printed with small letters; with a hyphen if they are to be joined; thus, i-Dee, Bet-ou; or, if to be detached, in curves usually; thus, (i)Dee, (ā)Dee, Tee(ā). When a vowel is printed in a report, or word-form or phrase-sign, the insertion of that vowel (for the sake of distinction) is denoted to be quite desirable

if it is printed in carves; thus, Es(ā), (ī)Em; but if the vowel is printed in brackets, [ ], it is indicated that the practiced reporter may omit it with entire safety; thus, Met[ā] Tet[ā], Bee-[ou].

32. KEY TO THE PRONUNCIATION.

A—āle, āb, at (āt, or át), ask, art.

Æ—ær=air.

E—ēve, ell or ěll, ěr, chapəl, æ (ē lengthened)

I—īre, it.

O—ōld, nōne, on, òr, ot=ought.

U—tūne, up or ūp, fuul=fool, full; ū (German long and short ü, and French long and short u).

DH—dhen=then, dhær=there.

TH—thin, think.

ZH—vizhon=vision, ruuzh=rouge.

NK—ink, sink, think.

(˙) Accent. (.) Diastole or Syllable-mark. (,) Nasalization.

33. It should be observed that 'æ' has precisely the same sound as a in at (that is, 'ă'), only that the former is pronounced slowly (that is, is long), while the latter is pronounced with greater rapidity (that is, is short). ā, ò are respectively the same as ă, a, only they are pronounced quicker than the latter.

34. Nk represents whispered ng and k. This combination of sounds is represented in Phonography by the letters Ing-Kay.

35. It should be observed that in those unaccented syllables where, in ordinary or colloquial pronunciation, it is difficult to distinguish any of the vowels provided with a sign in the alphabet, the sound heard is that which the author was the first to recognize and locate—a vocal sound produced at the glottis and unmodified by the other organs of speech, which in his Hand-Book of Standard Phonography is represented by ə, and denominated the Glottal Vowel.* It occurs in the ordinary pronunciation in such cases as the following: 'ĕvəl, setəl, chapəl, metəl, ōshən, mōshən, nābər, fĕrfəl, əwāk, rĕfĕr, pĕrhəps, grāmər.

36. But wherever the glottal vowel occurs, the author makes it a rule to retain the vowel-letter of the common spelling, for the following reasons:

1. Because that vowel-letter sounded as in the phonetic alphabet is usually the one heard in a distinct, syllabic pronunciation, and it is not desirable to make a difference in representation between the syllabic and the colloquial pronunciation.

2. Because that vowel-letter phonetically sounded is the one which often appears in case of change of accent; as in 'metəl, metalik; rĕfĕr, rĕfĕrens; prĕfĕr, prĕfĕrens.'

3. Because, in a colloquial pronunciation, as a natural consequence of the laws of accent, the glottal vowel is produced wherever it should properly be heard, whatever letter may be employed; as in 'ĕvəl, setəl, chapəl, metəl, ōshən, mōshən, nābər, fĕrfəl, əwāk, rĕfĕr, pĕrhəps, grāmər;' and it should be a rule not to do a work of supererogation.

4. Because this rule serves to make a closer approximation to the common spelling, and to render the transition thereto easier.

* See Hand-Book of Standard or American Phonography, Part 2, p. 214, g. The Appendix to Part 2 of this work is devoted to the classification and description of the sounds of the human voice; and all interested in Phonology will find in it original work worthy of their attention—ideas, derived from a view of Nature herself in this department of manifestation which dispel many mis ideas thrown about the subject of Phonology, by those who are learned as to the opinions of others, but who have neglected independent observation.

VOCALIZATION.

87. When writing with the standard-vowel scheme (see Comp., 47; 48), write

A second-place heavy dot for either  $\bar{a}$  or  $\bar{x}$

A second-place light dot for  $e$ ,  $\check{e}$ , or  $\hat{e}$ .

A third-place light dot for  $a$ ,  $\check{a}$ ,  $\acute{a}$ , or  $\hat{a}$ .

A third-place heavy dot for  $\bar{a}$  or  $\bar{\hat{a}}$ .

A first-place heavy dash for  $\bar{o}$  or  $\bar{\hat{o}}$ .

A second-place heavy dash for  $\bar{o}$ ,  $\bar{\hat{o}}$ .

88. The distinct sign for  $\bar{o}$  is a light first-place dash written at an oblique angle with the consonant stroke.

89. The distinct sign for  $\hat{a}$  is a light third-place arrow-point. See Comp., p. 296, 14th sound in the Extended Alphabet.

CONTRACTIONS, REFERENCES, POSITION, ETC.

40. Besides the usual contractions employed in dictionaries, I use the following—cs, corresponding style; acs, advanced corresponding style; rs, reporting style; ars, advanced reporting style; ws, word-sign; cws, corresponding word-sign; acws, advanced corresponding word-sign; rws, reporting word-sign; arws, advanced reporting word-sign; dws, derivative word-sign; cdws, corresponding derivative word-sign; rdws, reporting derivative word-sign; cn, contraction; sp cn, special contraction; rcn, reporting contraction; den, derivative contraction; r, reporting, as in rws, reporting word-sign; ps, phrase-sign; eps, corresponding phrase-sign; pw or phr, phrase-writing; wt, without; do., ditto, the same; fr., frequent.

41. References are to the Compendium (Part II. of the Hand-Book), unless otherwise stated; and to the sections, unless otherwise specified.

42. The first form given after a word is understood to be for the cs, unless otherwise specified.

43. The form for the rs is the same as for the cs, unless differently indicated.

44. The phrase-signs are for the rs, unless otherwise stated in connection with the phrase.

45. The position of a form is generally left to be determined by the rules of position, except in case of word-signs, contractions, and phrase-signs.

NOMENCLATURE.

Ar, downward curve for r. See Ray.
a, denotes widening of En to add b.
 -d or -ED, denoting shortening to add d.
 -DER, denotes lengthening to add dr.
 -DHER, denotes lengthening to add dhr.
 -DHERDHER, denotes trebling to add dhrdhr.
 -DHER'DHERDHER, denotes quadrupling to add dhrdhrdhr.
 -ED or -D, denotes shortening to add c'.
 -EF or -F, denotes an Ef-hook to add f or v.
 Ef, the stroke for f.
 -EL, denotes the El-hook.
 EL, downward curve-sign for l. 12, 3.
 EM, stroke for m.
 EN, stroke for n. [181; 182.
 -EN or -N, usually denotes the En-hook.
 -ER, denotes the Ar-hook. See Ler.
 ES, stroke for s. See Iss. EsEs=Es-Iss.
 ESTEF, Es with Ef-hook. 181, 2.
 ESTEN, Es with En-hook. Sen=Iss-En.
 ESIRON or -ESIRON, small Shon-hook after circle, loop, or hook. 197.
 Ist, shortened Es, downward. See Ist.
 -ET or -T, denotes shortening to add t. 212; 213.
 -F or -EF, denotes Ef-hook.
 -GEE, denotes lengthening to add gr.
 -KER, denotes lengthening to add kr.

-LER, denotes the Ler hook. 175.
 IN, denotes In-hook.
 Ish, downward sh. 12, 2. IshES = Ish-Iss or -s, small circle. See Es. [Iss.
 Ist, shortened Is, upward. See Est.
 LAY, curve-sign for l, written upward. See kl.
 -P, denotes widening of En to add p.
 RAY, straight r, always upward. See Ar.
 -REL or -RL, denotes the Rel-hook. 175.
 REL, Ray with large initial hook for l.
 -S or S-, small circle. See Es and Iss.
 SEF=Iss-Ef. See Esref.
 SES or -SES, large circle.
 SESIS, treble-size circle.
 SHAY, upward sh: do. with En-hook, SHAYN; do. shortened, SHAYT.
 SHEN or Ish'EN, downward Ish and En-hook.
 -SHON, denotes large Shon-hook. 190.
 -ST, ST-, or STEN, small loop.
 STEF, Iss-Tef. STEN, Iss-Ten.
 STER, Iss-Ter. -STER, large loop.
 -TER, denotes lengthening to add tr.
 -THER, denotes lengthening to add thr.
 -TIV, denotes Tiv-hook.
 WAYN, Way with En-hook.
 WEI, WEN, WEN, WER, Lay, Em, En, Ray with the Way-hook.

CONTRACTIONS.

a, advanced. [add]=additional, in Appendix.
cn, contraction.
do., ditto.
fr, frequently.
phr, phraseography, or phrase-writing.
ps, phrase-sign.
pw, phrase-writing.

r, reporting.
sp, special.
thr, there, their, etc. See Dhr in this Dictionary.
ths—this, these, those, or thus.
w, word. w, with. W., Webster.
wh, which.
wt, without.

COMBINATIONS.

dws, derivative word-sign.
cws, corresponding word-sign.
rws, reporting word-sign.
es, corresponding style.

rs, reporting style.
ars, advanced reporting style.
ren, reporting contraction.
eps, corresponding phrase-sign.

THE STANDARD-PHONOGRAPHIC DICTIONARY.

THE letter 'a' has nine different sounds—ā, e, æ, á, â, ã, à, ă, o—as in 'ale, many, pare, at, ask, ah, art, all, what.' The sound of pare is the same as the vowel of at, only the former is long while the latter is short. In the production of æ and á the tongue is curved upwardly, thus, —. In the production of a (ask) the tongue is nearly straight, while in pronouncing ā, à, the root of the tongue is slightly depressed. The sounds denoted by ā, à are the same in quality but different in quantity, ā being long, while à is short. The vowel of what (o) is deepened ă. See p. 212, Rem. 3.

Ordinarily æ is represented by the sign of ā; á by the sign of a; and à by the sign of ã. For the distinct signs for æ, á, and à, see 4s, and p. 206, § 24, (14).

A-, a, or ă. A prefix to many English words, as in asleep, awake, ahead, afoot, abed. (2.) Words with this prefix are usually distinguished from those without it—as sleep, wake, head, foot, bed—by a difference of outline resulting from the requirements of vocalization, speed, and legibility. See Orth., §§ 3, 4, and 5. Asleep, for instance, must commence with Es (60), so as to permit the writing of the first vowel, while sleep commences with Iss, as the briefest sign for s (5s, a). See 117, 4, and 120, 2; 146 and 149, 2; 220, E, 2; Orth., 5, K, 1, a and b. (3.) In some cases, especially when the form of the word does not necessarily imply an initial vowel, it is best to write the prefix a- by the a-tick, as in a<sup>h</sup>far, a<sup>h</sup>slope, a<sup>h</sup>lant, a<sup>h</sup>work, a<sup>h</sup>ccary. In this way, the word-sign for aware, Wer<sup>s</sup>, might be completed or 'filled out.'

A, article: pronounced ā when emphatic; usually ă (see p. 214, g); res, a heavy dot (ā) on the line. It is usually represented by a horizontal or perpendicular tick joined to a following or a preceding word

Not distinguished in rapid writing from an-d ..... 69, R. 2.

Expressed by a tick ..... 71.

Preceded by -ing ..... 114.

Sometimes omitted ..... 250, 3.

Written to imply a preceding to, p. 188.

ABACK, abak<sup>h</sup>, Bee-Kay.

Accom-, a prefix: expressed in Standard Phonography by a heavy dot written at the beginning of the remainder of the word. 111, 3; 228, 1. It has been proposed to write Kay for ac and imply com by writing the remainder of the word near, or under, the Kay. This suggestion seems to come only from an idea that accom being written with a heavy dot, can not be distinguished from com, written with a light dot. If this idea were true, the whole Phonographic plan of heavy and light dots for long and short vowels would be liable to a serious—a. f. tal objection. Of several objections to the proposed plan, one may be mentioned, namely, that it amounts to repeating the Kay, while there is but one heard; it is, therefore, unphonetic. You might as well do, what the merest tyro in Phonography would not do—write two Kays in accord, account, accurate, etc.; or you might as well repeat the Em in 'akom'odēt.'

ACTOR, aktor, Kay-Ter.

The sign for a verb employed as a sign for the actor. p. 194, R. 7.

In many words, in which a straight-line consonant precedes the termination
ter or to—such as blotter, platter, spatter, strutter, traitor, editor, charter, seater, actor, gauger.—the t might be expressed by halving, and the r added by Ar or Ray. But it is better, as a general rule, to write the termination of such words with Ter; 1, because they are then analogous to keeper, teacher, baker, broker, beggar (Orth., 7, 3), in which the r is expressed by an r hook; 2, because Ter is usually the briefest sign for tr after a straight-line consonant; 3, because the other mode of expressing r, in such case, may be resorted to for the purpose of distinction: as between actor, Kay-Ter, and actress, Ket-Ray.

ADMONISH-ED-ITION, vs, Dee<sup>3</sup>-Men.
 Diminish-ed-ation, Dee<sup>3</sup>-Men.

The general rule observed by the author in devising contractions for a word and one or more of its derivatives is to go only so far in their expression as they coincide ; and sometimes to stop short of that if the words are very long and a suggestive contraction can be secured without. In other words, the rule is to express so much and only so much of a word to be contracted as is necessary to suggest the entire word and distinguish it from others (237, R. 4). Admonish and Admonition coincide in the syllables admon. The expression of this common part of the two words constitutes their contraction, and also that of admonished, inasmuch as the reporter writes the past tense or perfect participle the same as the present tense whenever a stroke or more can be saved thereby (253, R. 2 ; p. 168, R. 8). The syllables admon are expressed by Dee-Men (instead of Dee-Em-En, the signs used in the full expression), because that is the briefest expression.

ANCIENT, an'shent, Enshont.

The promulgators of the Old Phonography taught that a large-hook letter could not or should not be shortened; probably from the fear that the stroke if shortened would be shorter than the hook, just as though the hook were not to be properly proportioned either to the general size of Phonography or to the particular letter. It is a principle of Standard Phonography that ALL hooked letters may be shortened; and hence are secured convenient forms for 'ancient, motioned, fashioned, sanctioned, impatient,' and similar words.

 The publisher of Standard Phonography, in devising contractions, has constantly kept in view the principle of making analogous contractions for analogous words; so that one contraction familiarized usually indicates or suggests the contractions for several other words. (This is only one of many things as to which Standard Phonography possesses invaluable advantages over the Old Phonography.) Many contractions are formed in analogy with the contractions for apprehensive-shon; apprehensible; as, Sten for extensive-shon, Stens for ex-

In such phrases as 'as far as you (he, I, we, or they) can,' 'as near as you can,' the pronoun 'I, we, you, ye, he, or they' may usually be expressed with convenience; but the experienced reporter may omit it in such phrases with entire safety, easily supplying the proper pronoun by the context and memory. In the above phrases a dash is substituted for these pronouns; 'As far as — can' = 'As far as I (we, you, he, or they) can.'

The letters ee, ci, and ti before a vowel, often have the sound of sh, as in 'ectaceous, gracious, factions.' Probably, in such words as 'ectaceous, gracious,' ee and ci had the sound of si; thus, sētās'ius, grās'ius; which sounds were changed to sy; thus, sētās'yus, grās'yus; which sounds were finally substituted by sh. Probably, in such words as 'factions,' t was first changed to s, and i to y, and finally sy were changed to sh. In this view of the euphonic changes from the presumed original powers of the letters, it is proper to assert, as Webster does, that it is a mistake that e alone in this class of words has the sound of sh. But it does not follow as matter of logic or fact that these changes are always made, as, for instance, in 'associate, vitiate.' These words appear to be pronounced 'asō'shiāt, vish'iāt,' that is, giving to e or t alone the sound of sh. This appears to be for the purpose of making an additional syllable so that the secondary accent can fall on āt; and this is especially required for the easy pronunciation of the past tenses of such words, as, 'asō'shiāt'ed, vish'iāt'ed.' Make a syllable less in these words, and they must be pronounced 'asō'sheted, vish'et'ed'—pronunciations perfectly destitute of authority of any kind,—or, you must accent two successive syllables; thus, 'asō'shāt'ed, vish'āt'ed;' which is destitute of any just authority, and contrary to the genius of our language at least, in respect of accent. (2.) Ease of accent also requires that i should keep the sound of a vowel in such words as 'association, vitiation'—'asō'siā'shon, vishiā'shon,' not 'asō'shā'shon, vishā'shon. Webster says—'In such words as pronunciation, euphony seems to require that cia should be uttered in two syllables, prōnuns'iā'shon, to prevent the repetition of the sound of sh, prōnunshā'shon.' This does not seem to be the sole reason, else what becomes of vishā'shon? The reason is partly, perhaps, because such words are not regarded as derivatives from 'prōnun'shiāt': 'denun'shiāt' etc., but from pronounce, denounce, etc. And this class of words being so pronounced, analogy, perhaps, and perhaps a knowledge of the Latin words from which they are derived, cause association, and similar words to be pronounced as though belonging to the class of 'pronounce, pronunciation; denounce, denunciation.'

B.—Its Name, Sound, and Relations.

This, the second letter of the English Alphabet, is named Bee. Its usual sound is what is denominated in the Author's analysis of the voice (see Appendix to the Compendium), the middle labial sonant explodent, that is, a sonant or spoken explodent produced at the middle of the lips. (2.) If when the lips are in the proper position to produce b, they are slightly separated and the sonant voice (u) allowed to escape as in making z, there will be produced the middle labial sonant hiss, that is, the smooth sibilant of b. This sound, in accordance with the usual plan of denoting sibilation or aspiration, may be expressed by bh. It may be called aspirated Bee, or Bhee. (3.) Bh is the sound of the Latin b, the Greek F (Digamma), the German w, the Hebrew Bheth, and the Spanish b between vowels. (4.) The Standard-Phonographic sign for bh is a tapering Bee (p. 205, § 21). A considerable convenience may be secured in phonographing German by using, instead of the tapered Bee, one of the signs for w. No error in reading can result from this, if the reader will bear in mind that the sound of our w does not occur in that language. (6.) And those who can not pronounce bh should substitute for it our w rather than r. (7.) Nasalized or twanged b is m; p. 205, 20, 6, and R. 1, h. (8.) Trilled b is a sound made to infants; p. 295, 20, 5, and R. 1, g; p. 205, 22.

D. This, the fourth letter of the English alphabet, is named Dec. Its usual sound is what is denominated in the Author's analysis of voice the inner-middle dental sonant explodent (p. 210, § 25, No. 47); that is, a sonant explodent produced at the gums. For remarks on the dental explodents and sibilants see Compendium, p. 214, R. 6 and 7. (2.) The sound of th in thy is a rough sibilant (or hush) of d, or, strictly speaking, of d', a variety of d. It is classified as the outer-middle dental sonant hush. This sound, in accordance with the usual mode of denoting aspiration or sibilation, may be expressed by dh. It may be called aspirated Dec, or Dhec. Aspirated Tee has been denoted by th; aspirated Dec should be expressed in a corresponding manner. (3.) Dh is the sound of the Greek  $\delta$ ; of the Hebrew aspirated Daleth, that is, Dhalet; and of the Spanish d between vowels. (4.) Nasalized or twanged d is n. (5.) A variety of d (that is, d') is produced by placing the tip of the tongue against the outer portion of the hard palate, and at the same time pressing the lower surface of the tip of the tongue against the gum. This sound is the Arabic Dād; sometimes called by phonologists, Strengthened Dec. This may be represented in print by α; in Phonography by Dee. (6.) The corresponding whisper is the Arabic Tā.

Dhr—In the es of Standard Phonography a full-length curve-sign, except Ing, without a final attachment, may be lengthened to add their, they are, or there. (2.) In the rs, any full-length, straight or curved, even Ing, without a final attachment, may be lengthened to add not only there, they are, and their, but also other, and, in the writing of the practiced reporter, they were. (3.) As this mode of adding dhr=there, their, they are, other, they were, is very important in respect of speed, the reporter, in order to avail himself of it, sometimes omits
 (c) Any word which may be readily supplied, as of, to, an, or the; thus, Seindher<sup>2</sup>, some of their; Wendher<sup>2</sup>, one (an)other, or, one of their; Teedher<sup>2</sup>, to (an)other, to (the) other; Wer<sup>1</sup>-Efdher, with reference to their. See Another.

(4.) Dhr, when it can not otherwise be conveniently expressed in a phrase-sign, may be denoted by a heavy tick written in the direction of Bee or Jay—272. (5.) The experienced reporter may write the Dhr-tick in place of the dot for ing, for -ing dhr. This will not conflict with the affix-sign for -ingly (232, 5).

Own, not, one, -fore added to Dhr by a hook, 264, R. 5 and 6; 272, R. 2.

EX [L.], ex; a prefix, signifying out of or from; Kays.

Most dictionaries give egz as the pronunciation of this prefix when preceding a vowel. This may, in consequence of such erroneous guidance, have become the pronunciation of the majority; but the Author doubts whether any good reason can be assigned for the change from eks to egz. To him the pronunciation 'ek.zam'in, ek.zakt', ek.zamp'el,' seems easier for the organs of speech and more pleasant to the ear than 'eg.zam'in, eg.zakt', eg.zamp'el.' In these and similar words an original Es sound is changed, as in many other cases, to a Zee sound; but allowing this substitution of z for s to have taken place, there is no obvious reason for the change of k to g; for the law of enphony, which frequently requires a change from a spoken to a whispered sound, or the contrary, so as to make two adjoining consonants in the same syllable both whispered or spoken, does not apply in such cases as these, where the consonants belong to different syllables. Then there is nothing peculiar in the pronunciation of this prefix. The s, as in many other cases, is changed to z, and the k remains the rightful occupant of a position which has been wrongly given to g. The compend x should be understood to represent either ks or kz.

G. This, the seventh letter of the English alphabet, is named Jee. It sometimes has what is commonly called 'a hard sound,' as in 'go, get,' and sometimes what is generally called 'a soft sound,' as in 'general, George.' The sound of g in go is what is denominated in the Author's analysis of the voice (see the Appendix to the Compendium) the outer guttural sonant expicdent. The corresponding whisper is the sound of k. The inner guttural explodents are k and g produced with the tongue drawn back. The effects are forcibly uttered or 'strengthened' k and g. p. 211, Nos. 73 and 74. (2.) If, when the organs are in the proper position to produce g, the contact is broken, and the sonant voice (3) allowed to escape in the manner it escapes in producing zh, there will be produced the outer guttural sonant hush, i.e., the rough sibilant of g. This sound, in accordance with the usual plan of expressing aspiration and sibilation, may be expressed by gh. It may be called aspirated Gay, or Chay. This is the sound of the German g in Tag, and of the Hebrew Ghimel. (3.) The Standard-Phonographic sign for gh is a tapered Gay. p. 206, No. 75. (4.) Nasalized or twanged g is ng. p. 205, 20, 6, and R. 1, h. (5.) Trilled Gay is the sound produced in gargling. p. 205, 22. (6.) If g is employed in a phonetic alphabet to represent the sound of g in go, it should be named Gay.

H. (1.) This, the eighth letter of the English alphabet, is named Aitch; but a far better name would be Hay: for obviously the name of every letter should contain its sound. (2.) The sound of Hay is denominated in the Author's analysis of the voice (see Appendix to the Compendium) the glottal whispered hum. It is a gentle jerk of the breath, producing by its friction in passing through the glottis a consonant, or a sort of whispered vowel. (3.) The corresponding hum, that is, the glottal sonant hum, is an indifferent vowel. It is produced in very gentle groaning. This sound the Author represents by ə. For further remarks as to h and a, see the Comp., p. 214, R. 5, g. (4.) For the different sounds produced at the glottis, see the Comp., p. 211, Nos. 93-101 inclusive. (5.) The letter h has been extensively used in Romanic print to express sibilant or aspiration; thus, kh, gh, to denote the sibilants of k, g; sh, zh, to denote the rough sibilants corresponding to the smooth sibilants s, z; wh, rh, mh, to express whispered w, r, m. (6.) In such cases h is used, not to express of itself a separate consonant sound, but as a diacritic sign, to indicate a sound bearing to the sound represented by the letter preceding the h, a relation which is ordinarily signified by the term Aspirate—a term which covers different relations; for instance, aspirate Tee (th) is a whispered hush (i. e., rough sibilant) of Tee, or, more strictly speaking, corresponding to t; aspirate Dee (dh) is a sonant hush of d, or rather of a variety of d (d').—See Comp., p. 214, R. 6. Aspirate Way (wh) is the whispered liquid corresponding to w, as rh, mh, nh, lh, yh are whispered mates of r, m, n, l, y. (7.) As to the mode of expressing aspiration in Phonography, see Comp., p. 205, § 21. Two of the methods of expressing aspiration there employed, that of aspirating Ing, and that of aspirating Kay, Gay, Lay, originated with the Author. For writing foreign languages they are much better than the old practice of writing through the letters an s-like sign, which is employed in the Author's system of Phonographic Numerals to express "hundred." (8.) As to whether aspiration should be expressed in printing by h preceding or following the letter to be aspirated, see Comp., p. 215, § 26. (9.) As to different modes of expressing aspiration in printing, see Comp., p. 215, § 26, R. 1.

(1.) If followed by p, b, t, d, ch, j, k, or g, in the present tense of such monosyllabic verbs as hope, heap, heat, is represented by a Hay-dot. (2.) The stroke is employed in the past tenses of such verbs for the purpose of availing, without vocalization, of the halving principle. (3.) But it will be better to write this class of words without Hay whenever its use would prevent writing a desirable phrase-sign, as in writing 'it has been hoped,' Tees-Ben-Pet; 'has been heaped,' Iss<sup>2</sup>-Ben-Pet. This is indicated by inclosing Hay in curves, as in giving the outline for Hacked, 'vs, (Hay)-Ket.'

I. This, the ninth letter of the English alphabet, has five different sounds—ē, i, ē, ī, y—as in 'machine, it, bird, find, union.' (2.) The usual sound of 'i' in 'fine,' that is, 'long i,' is a diphthong, the elements of which are ā (as in art) and i (as in it), i. e., āi. p. 215, R. 9, e. As to the different pronunciations of 'long i,' see Comp., 90, R. 1.

(3.) The phonographic sign for ī is sometimes abbreviated, as in the contraction for 'highly,' and in the outlines for 'highland, high-priest.'

(4.) In the es, it is usually advantageous to join initial ī to a following letter, whenever the junction would be convenient; thus, ī-Vee, ivy; ī-Dee, eyed. See Comp., 240, 1. (b). The reporter, of course, if he expressed the ī at all, would avail himself of the joining whenever it would be of advantage; but he omits initial ī, as well as every other vowel, whenever it is not required for the sake of legibility. In giving outlines for words commencing with ī (or hī), only the consonants are expressed (except in those cases where even the reporter must insert the vowel), and the ī, like any other vowel, is to be inserted according to the rules of vocalization.

(1.) The pronoun I is sometimes (in the rs very frequently) joined to a following word, by one stroke of the sign (ī), written, according to convenience, in the direction of Pee, Tee, or Chay; thus, Petoid<sup>1</sup>-Em, I am (or I may); Retoid-Dee<sup>2</sup>, I do; Retoid-Dee<sup>3</sup>, I had; Retoid-Ith<sup>2</sup>, I think.

(2.) The reporter does, and the practiced writer of the corresponding style may, join I to a preceding word, or between two words, by one stroke of the sign (i), written, according to convenience, in the direction of Tee or Kay, i. e., by Tetoid or Ketoid; thus, Em<sup>2</sup>-Ketoid-Net, may I not; Ef<sup>1</sup>-Tetoid-Weh, if I were. As he, in the acs and rs, are written by the same sign as joined the; so I, when joined to a preceding word, in the acs and rs, are written by the same sign as joined a-n.

(3.) The practiced reporter may omit I in such phrases as, 'as far as I can,' 'as near as I can,' 'as well as I can.' See remark at the end of phrases commencing with As, p. 25 of this work.

J.

J. This, the tenth letter of the English alphabet, is named Jay. Its sound, the same as that of 'soft g,' is a consonantal diphthong, the elements of which are d and zh', i. e., a variety of zh as in vizh'on = vision. To produce zh', the true hush of z, the upper surface of the tongue very near the tip must make a sibilant contact with the gums at the point for z; which results in a very delicate zh; while in the production of the rather rough sound zhi (in vizh'on), the true hush of z' (i. e., z made back of the point for the ordinary z), "the tongue is broadened and seemingly endeavors to fill the whole palate." (2.) If the mere varieties of elementary sounds were distinguished by types, the elements of j would be given as dzh'; but this would be entirely unnecessary, because the attempt to produce zhi in connection with a preceding

d naturally develops the variety zh'. See Comp., p. 214, R. 6 (3.) Some phonologists have concluded because j was not composed of d and the ordinary zh, that it was not compound at all, but a simple sound;—a fallacy precisely corresponding to the inference that the number eleven is incapable of resolution because it can not be resolved into two fives; whereas it is actually composed of a five and a six. (4.) The peculiarity of a German's pronunciation of j will be found to consist in making the second element sh instead of zh, simply because he is not acquainted in his own language with the sound of zh. He would make a nearer approximation to the English j by pronouncing dy = his dj. A Frenchman, having in his language the sound of zh = the French j, experiences no difficulty in pronouncing the English j = French dj. The comparison of these two facts furnishes sufficient proof that j is composed of d and zh.

K. This, the eleventh letter of the English alphabet, is named Kay. (2.) The sound of Kay is denominated in the Author's analysis of the voice (see Appendix to the Compendium) the outer guttural whispered explodent. The corresponding sonant is the sound of Gay. See under G in this Dictionary. (3.) A strengthened Kay is produced by drawing the tongue well back when making k; i. e. by making a contact back of the point of contact for the common Kay. (4.) If, when the organs are in the proper position to produce k, the contact is broken up and the whispered voice (h) allowed to escape after the manner of its escape in producing sh, there will be produced the outer guttural whispered hush; i. e. the whispered rough sibilant of, or corresponding to, g—p. 211, sound No. 76. This sound, according to the usual plan of expressing aspiration or sibilation, may be expressed by kʰ. This is the sound of the German ch in Daeh, of the Latin ch, of the Greek χ, of the Hebrew Khaph, and of the Welsh c. (5.) The Standard-Phonographic sign for kh is a swelled Kay. p. 206, 24, No. 76. (6.) Nasalized or twanged Kay is whispered ng. This is the sound of n in sink, thank, and of the Welsh ngh. This sound may be denoted by ñ. p. 216, R. 1, b. In Phonography there is ordinarily no distinction made between ng and ñ, both being represented by ng. (7.) Tripled Kay is the sound produced by hawking. See under G, H, and Q.

L. This, the twelfth letter of the English alphabet, is named El. (2.) Its sonant sound is denominated in the Author's analysis of the voice (see the Appendix to the Compendium.) the inner-middle dental sonant hum (or liquid). p. 211, sound No. 55; p. 205, 20, R. 1, e. (3.) Its corresponding whisper is the sound of l in the English ply, and of the Welsh ll, as in Llanelly (= Lhanelhi). (4.) This whisper may be represented, in accordance with the usual mode of expressing sibilant and aspiration, by lh. p. 205, 21. (5.) For the Standard-Phonographic sign, see p. 206, 24, No. 56; p. 205, 21. (6.) Lh in English requires no distinct sign, because its situation (namely, after another whisper, as in ply) always serves to distinguish it from the sonant. (7.) For the varieties of L, see p. 214, R. 7. (8.) The phonographic stroke for l when written upward is called, in the Author's Phonographic Nomenclature, Lay; and El, when written downward.

M. This, the thirteenth letter of the English alphabet, is named Em. (2.) Its sound is called in the Author's analysis of the voice (see Appendix to the Compendium) the middle labial sonant twang. (3.) Its corresponding whisper is heard in the English tempt, and in the French schisme. It may, in accordance with the usual plan of indicating aspiration, be represented, as in Welsh, by mh. In English, its situation (namely, before a whispered consonant, as in tempt), is sufficient to distinguish it from the sonant m.

N. This, the fourteenth letter of the English alphabet, is named En. (2.) Its sound is denominated in the Author's analysis of the voice (see the Appendix to Part II. of the Hand-Book) the inner-middle dental sonant twang. (3. The corresponding whisper, which is the Welsh nh, and perhaps heard in the English sent, inch, may be indicated, in accordance with the usual mode of expressing aspiration, by nh. (4.) Dental twangs of the Arabic Dād and Tā are possible. (5.) In the combination nz, as in long, and in the combination nk, as in ink, the letter n is taken simply as the type of nasalization, and denotes that the g or k is to be nasalized.

O. This, the fifteenth letter of the English language, has nine different sounds—ō, q, u, ò, ó, w, a, i, wu—as in “nō, nqre, son, òr, on, move, woman, women, one=wun.” (2.) The sound represented by q is the true short quantity of ō. It is heard in the usual pronunciation of “whole”=hōl, not hrl nor hōl; “none”=nqn, not nōn nor nun; “most”=mqst, not mōst nor must. In a pronouncing alphabet this sound should not be represented by ô, which is a well-settled sign for o, as in on, but by o. (3.) The sound denoted by ô is the true short quantity of o. Having taken o as the sound of o in on, the sign for o in or, which is the next below o, is formed by a flat (i. e., the so-called grave accent) over o; thus, ô. (4.) Let â à be taken as the signs of the vowels of âh and ârt. See under A, in this work. Now, o as in on is a deepened â. See p. 212, R. 3. A prolonged o is the corresponding long vowel â, which is the sound of the French â. The English word pot, pronounced with a prolonged vowel, is precisely the French word pâte.

O, a prefix in Irish names, ô; to be written as a part of the vocalization of the consonants of the remainder of the name; thus, O'Conner, (ô)Key-Ner; O'Dowd, (ô)Ded.

O, as an initial, should be written in accordance with directions of the Comp., § 83 and R. 2.
